

they broke it. we fix it.

—an Anthropocene manifesto—

We know who did it. They devised the steam engine and built empires with it. They waged wars and pillaged resources. They broke the world and won't stop.

To add insult to injury —they want to fix it themselves. But we won't even let them try, since we know that they're not up to the task. Their alienating techno-fixes will bring only more failures and disasters.

Instead, we will do it ourselves. We will remediate the terror they unleashed on this planet. We will outsmart their greed with kindness. We will replace their sophisticated scarcity with simple abundance.

*We will make what we love,
love what we share,
and share what we make.*